We will discuss what to do when someone talks about ending their life, tools that alert us to warning signs and learn about risk and protective factors for youth suicidality.

Aurora offers the virtual suicide prevention training program More Than Sad for teachers, parents, and organizations across Arizona, FOR FREE. The training series will teach participants how to recognize mental health conditions, the warning signs of suicide, and the steps they can take to get help individuals who may be at risk. The virtual training is approximately 2 hours in length (time for Q&A included). To book a training, send an email to: azmarketing@aurorabehavioral.com

2020 has been a particularly concerning year for overdoses, and numerous cities, counties, and states within the U.S. have seen an increase in both overdoses and overdose facilities in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Youth who feel suicidal are not likely to seek help directly; however, parents, school personnel, and peers can recognize the warning signs and take immediate action to keep the youth safe. When a youth gives signs that they may be considering suicide, the following actions should be taken:

- Remain calm.
- Ask the youth directly if he or she is thinking about suicide (e.g., "Are you thinking of suicide?").
- Focus on your concern for their well-being and avoid being accusatory.
- Listen.
- Reassure them that there is help and they will not feel like this forever.
- Do not judge.
- Provide constant supervision. Do not leave the youth alone.
- Remove means for self-harm.
- Get help: No one should ever agree to keep a youth's suicidal thoughts a secret and instead should tell an appropriate caregiving adult, such as a parent, teacher, or school psychologist. Parents should seek help from school or community mental health resources as soon as possible. School staff should take the student to a school-employed mental health professional or administrator.

*If you or someone you know is suicidal, get help immediately via 911, the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 1-800-273-TALK or the Crisis Text Line (text "HOME" to 741741).
Giving back to feel Happier and Healthier

WHY? Doing things for others is a powerful antidepressant and self-esteem booster. Help your teen find a cause they are interested in and that gives them a sense of purpose. If you volunteer with them, it can create a bonding experience and increase connection. Volunteering helps counteract the effects of stress, anger, and anxiety, combats depression, increases self-confidence, provides a sense of purpose, AND helps you stay physically healthy.

WHERE? Teen Lifeline-VOLUNTEER and help your peers! The crisis hotline would not be possible without teens who volunteer their time. Peer counselors have helped more than 281,000 callers find hope and healing.

HOW? https://teenlifeline.org/get-involved/volunteer/

Walk to Prevent Suicide! Yes, even virtually!

Participate your way for NAMIWalks’ second National Day of Hope on October 10. Support your local community, your hometown, and maybe even the hometown of someone you love — it is all possible this year. Choose any number of walks (in-person and/or virtual), lace up your shoes, and join the best and the brightest mental health advocates in the country.
September’s SEL Focus is Emotional Awareness

Support Services is creating a curriculum map for SEL (Social Emotional Learning) to be implemented on our K-12 campuses. Students throughout the district will engage in weekly lessons that support social emotional skills with a focus on Casel’s 5 core areas: self awareness, self management, responsible decision making, relationship skills, and social awareness.

The topic of focus for September is Emotional Awareness, which allows students to understand the emotions they are feeling, regulate their emotions, and sense the emotional state of others.

One strategy that can be reinforced at home to bring about more emotional awareness is to ask children what they are feeling in a variety of situations. Kids can identify the emotions they are feeling by acknowledging some of the physical signs of different emotions. Teaching kids how to monitor their emotional state and having them understanding the physical signs of different emotions is the first step to teach emotional regulation, which can assist individuals in maintaining peace and clarity in a variety of challenging situations.

For more information and activities to reinforce the skill of Emotional Awareness, please visit our SEL Curriculum partner- Sanford Harmony at https://www.sanfordharmony.org/.

Building Positive Relationships with Your Kids

We all love our kids, but sometimes it can be hard to know how to connect with them. Now more than ever, it’s important for all of us to build trusting positive relationships with our children. Here are some ways that can help:

Ask them about their interests: It’s easier to build a positive bond with our children when they see us taking a genuine interest in the things they care about. This can help break down barriers, and be a great way to build up their level of comfort to talk to you about more challenging subjects.

Allow for regular unstructured, uninterrupted time with your child: Build in time each week to just enjoy spending time with your child(ren) without an agenda. Allow them to take the lead on what you do (try to give them your undivided attention during this time, even a few moments can go a long way, consistency is key).

Respect and validate their emotions: It can be hard to to know what to do with our own feelings, let alone our kids. When we validate our children’s emotions and feelings, it makes it easier to help them learn healthy ways to work through them. This is not always easy to do, so if you’re frustrated, tell your child you’ll come back and talk to them at a better time (just be sure to do so). It’s also okay to be vulnerable and let your child know that you don’t know the best way to help them through their emotions, but that you’re willing to figure it out together.
Helpful Apps to Boost Mental Health

Headspace: provides a WIDE variety of meditations, sleep, and movement exercises to help you out, however you are feeling. Helps reduce anxiety and stress and improve attention and awareness. Free content.

Calm: includes free meditations for stress, sleep, AND has meditations for kids.

Breathe2Relax: free, designed by the National Center for Telehealth and Technology to teach breathing techniques to manage stress.

Happify: provides science based activities and games that are meant to reduce stress, build resilience, and overcome negative thoughts.

MoodPath: personalized mental health companion, that “learns” from your responses and generates insights and provides resources most relevant to your emotional health.

MoodTools: a self help app targeting depression. Provides psychoeducation about risk factors, a thought diary, a suicide safety plan, and videos.

PTSD Coach: self help app from the National Center for PTSD provides education, assesses PTSD, and offers easy to understand tips to manage common PTSD symptoms, and offers additional treatment resources.

Quit That! free app that helps users beat their habits or addictions. A recovery tool to track and monitor your progress.

Medisafe: a medication reminder app

Shine: a self care app with research based strategies to help you reduce stress, boost self compassion, helps with focus and battles burnout.
